Opana ER Dosing and Uses

Opana ER is formulated as an extended-release tablet, allowing oxymorphone to be released gradually for consistent pain relief throughout the day. Typical adult dosing ranges from 20mg to 40mg every 12 hours, taken with or without food. Dosage may vary based on individual response and medical history, and should always be determined by a healthcare professional.

Opana ER is commonly prescribed for:

- Moderate to severe chronic pain when alternative treatments are ineffective
- Acute postoperative pain, often alongside immediate-release pain medications

Common Side Effects of Opana ER

Like all opioid medications, Opana ER may cause side effects. Most are manageable with proper dosing and medical supervision. Common side effects include:

- Drowsiness or dizziness
- Nausea or vomiting
- Constipation
- Headache

- Dry mouth
